

Abstract Of The Disclosure

A pressure sensor having a sensor diaphragm for measuring pressure in combustion chambers of internal combustion engines, the pressure sensor being located in a housing, and high pressure and temperature fluctuations occurring in the 5 combustion chamber. A heat shield made of a good heat-conducting material and provided with orifices is placed upstream from the sensor diaphragm to dissipate the heat to the housing surrounding the pressure sensor.